

British Engineering Services Certification

Statement on Impartiality

Impartiality

British Engineering Services understands the importance of impartiality in carrying out its certification activities, we manage conflicts of interest and ensure the objectivity of our certification activities.

British Engineering Services has no direct involvement in the design, manufacture, supply, installation, use or maintenance of the items or similar competitive items that we inspect / certify. British Engineering Services is thus independent of the designer, manufacturer, supplier, installer, purchaser, owner, user and/or manufacturer and does not hold 'authorised representative' status for any of these parties.

All interested parties are afforded access to the services that British Engineering Services offer without any undue financial or other conditions and the procedures and standards we operate are administered in a non-discriminatory way.

All British Engineering Services personnel are free of any commercial, financial or other pressures that might influence their judgement. Organisations outside British Engineering Services cannot influence the results of inspections and testing in any way. The remuneration of staff involved with inspection and testing is in no way dependent on the number of inspections and / or certifications performed.

No business activities are undertaken which conflict with this independence of judgement and impartiality of opinion and action.